DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent Number 5,115,108 to Ogawa, et al, in view of U.S. Patent Number 4,401,864 to Ichikawa.

Ogawa, et al, discloses a switch comprises:

- (1) A housing; (abstract)
- (2) An operating knob, which is pivotally supported on the housing; (abstract) (Column 4, lines 58 & 59)
- (3) A contact wiring board having opposing contact end portions arranged under push bodies; (abstract)
- (4) A rubber switch member interposed between the housing and the contact wiring board and having conductive contact pieces arranged so as to be opposed to the mutually-opposing contact end portions, respectively on the contact wiring board; and switching members in particular, such as rubber buckling portions formed together with the rubber switch member or elastically slidable push members; (abstract)
- (5) A rubber buckling portions of the rubber switch member as click feeling providing members. (abstract)

Art Unit: 2832

(6) Overstroke means, such as the rubber buckling type, by which the rubber buckling portion can be further depressed or buckled a little more stroke even after the contact pieces have been brought into contact with the contact portions. The rubber shape can deformably absorb the difference in stroke between the two rubber buckling portions.

Ogawa, et al, discloses the claimed invention except for the plurality of pressing portions extending from the operating knob.

Ichikawa discloses a switch mechanism comprising an operating member in a rockable manner, protuberances formed on the operating member, which when the operating member is depressed, the protuberances, respectively, open or close their associated electrical contacts. (Column 4, lines 41-42, 61-66) (Figures 4 and 5)

One skilled in the art, at the time the invention was made, would have found it obvious to combine the teachings of Ogawa, et al, with the teachings of Ichikawa and extend leg portions from the reverse surface of the operating knob in order to contact the contact portions stationed directly below.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments, see paper number 9, filed February 12, 2003, with respect to the rejection(s) of claim(s) 1 and 2 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent Number 5,115,108 to Ogawa, et al, in view of U.S. Patent Number 6,239,392 to Serizawa, et al. have been fully considered and are persuasive. Therefore, the rejection has been withdrawn. However, upon further consideration, a new ground(s) of rejection has been made. See above art rejection.

Further arguments are addressed below:

(1) Objection to the specification (abstract) is withdrawn
